

Free Will and the Market

This may seem like a strange topic for market predictions but there is definitely a correlation in respect to free will and the market. There are technical models of reality that can predict future events. Some people think astrology may follow that path. Perhaps. But, there are others. The Master Pattern is one of the best of them!

The argument for free will is pretty clear. God gave us the ability to rationalize and think things through-intelligence. We are the masters of our own ship, as the saying goes. However, if this is the case, then how can The Master Pattern and other models predict certain events with such accuracy? How can technical process (math, geometry, etc.) accurately portray trends and even physical events well before their time? There are at least two citations in the Bible that represent preordained reality. The first is "I have placed your seed in the womb and set your days before you". The second is "even the very hairs on your head are numbered". (Matthew 10:30, Luke 12:7)

So, how are we to interpret free will? My experience in studying The Master Pattern and Natural Intelligence may shed some light on the subject. The first is that will is like an 8 lane highway. Once you get on the highway (path), there may be 8 ways to get there, which are your immediate choices. But, no matter what, you will arrive at the same place. That is the place you originally chose. (or someone else?) Many times this "original" decision is unconscious, or by rote. Hence, we may end up in places we don't give much thought to.

The second area is what I call "the creators limits". This is to say that our free will is limited proportionately to the manner in which you use it! By this notion, it is meant that there are multiple choices for implementing our choices. The degree of free choice, however, depends upon our point of reference and point of focus.

It is my experience, and belief, that the greatest model, focus and concept for free will is this-Seek your greatest degree of potential! The more our lives are centered on developing all areas of potential, the more choices and freedoms we will experience.

Moreover, the issue of free will is subject to the plan of the creator since the ultimate event, our demise, is beyond our wills. Therefore, it is logical that paths and decisions of the human mind are subject to the ultimate will, the creators. Any departure from that plan will lead to pain, failure, doubt, fear and more.